

“Kanohi ki te kanohi - a thing of the past? An Examination of Māori Engagement with Social Networking Sites and its Impacts on Whanaungatanga, Tikanga, and Tuakiri”

Acushla Dee O’Carroll

This talk presented findings on how rangatahi Māori are using social networking sites (SNS) and was contrasted with kaumātua perspectives on these technologies and the roles they play in the lives of Māori both young and old. The presentations were aimed at getting people thinking about the impacts of SNS to Māori people and culture. The paper for this presentation will form a chapter of my PhD thesis.
